

Please donate

We provide the present as well as other self-help manuals at no cost. If you have benefited from the manual and/or would like to support our research, please consider making a donation. Donations of $20/20€ or more help us, for example, to create new self-help videos. You may donate online via this link, and you will receive an official receipt within a few days.

Una versión preliminar del concepto fue probada con éxito en un reciente ensayo clínico realizado con 86 pacientes con TOC: el Manual para el Trastorno Obsesivo Compulsivo tuvo un impacto positivo en las obsesiones y depresiones relacionadas con el control. Si está interesado en los resultados, puede descargarse el artículo científico que encontrará abajo.

Please help us to help others!

Recognizing the difficult financial situation of many people suffering from obsessive-compulsive disorder (OCD), we offer this manual and other treatment programs we have developed free of charge.

Moreover, it is our explicit goal to evaluate and further improve myMCT by continuing scientific research. However, research is expensive. We therefore rely on federal funding and donations. If you would like to support us in providing free treatment materials to people with psychological disorders, we would be very grateful. We will of course provide these materials to you at no cost whether or not you make a donation. No one should feel morally obligated to donate! Donations will be used to further develop myMCT. Upcoming projects include translation of our manuals into other languages, improvements of the manual, and payment of staff members who conduct research studies. If needed for tax purposes, we are happy to send you a receipt (please send an email to Steffen Moritz (moritz@uke.de) and include your postal address and full name). Donations may be made to the account below or online.
